THE PARTIES.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 24th, 1884.

Editor Herald:

For the enlightenment of myself and other young men, please answer through your columns, What is the difference between Democracy and Republicanism? and oblige.

Yours respectfully,
JOSEPH WEILER, JR.

This same question has been asked and answered in these columns two or three times within the year—that is to say, answered as well as it may be in a newspaper article that is necessarily brief. To state all the differences between the two great political parties would require a degree of elaboration that may not be devoted to it in a daily newspaper, for the difference is wide and attaches to every branch of governmental policy as well as to the public service itself. We would advise our correspondent to study the platforms of the two parties, especially those that have been adopted since 1856, when the Republican party came into existence. By a comparison of these declarations that have been framed and promulgated every four years, he will be able to discover the marked difference between the two, both as to aspirations and operations, and for a political illustration of the difference he will have to read the history of his country under Democratic and Republican administrations. We may, however, aid him by briefly stating some of the principal points of difference in theory, as well as in practice and policy. The Democrats believe in the largest liberty to the individual consistent with safe government; and therefore that the natural rights of the citizen should be interfered with by the laws or the authority as little as possible, in all matters of domestic economy, of personal habits and customs, of manner of living, of labor, and, in fact, of everything that relates to the life and conduct of the person. The Republicans believe that large liberty to the individual is not conducive to strong government, the theory being that with too much freedom, the tendency of the man is towards recklessness and the disregard of the rules of good order, the liability to disorder, rioting, and instability of institutions being increased as the citizen is allowed wider freedom of personal action. The Democracy strives for absolute equality before the law of all citizens, recognizing no class distinctions, but holding that one man is as good as another, whatever his station in life, so far as the application of laws and rules are concerned; the Republicans are the lineal descendants of the Federalists, and cannot rid themselves of the idea that there should be classes in government and society, though there are none in nature; they are aristocratic and imperialistic in thought and sentiment, and naturally the tendency of their legislation is in the direction of creating social barriers in the community. The Democrats hold that the Constitution to which all the States have assented, confers upon the Federal government all the power to which the latter is entitled, and that the assumption of more is unauthorized, unjustifiable, unlawful and dangerously presumptuous. The States are supreme within themselves as to their internal affairs, and the Federal government cannot rightly interfere with them, so long as they maintain a republican form of government. In other words, the Democrats hold that all civil rights not granted and set forth in the Constitution are retained by the States, the idea being that the States are the power and the Federal government simply the machinery unitedly agreed upon for mutual convenience. The Republicans take the directly opposite view, assuming that the power and authority are centered in the general government, the States being subordinate and restricted in their functions to the narrowest limits. Acting upon this theory, the Republican party has from the first been grasping and presumptuous in its legislation and administration, reaching out all the time for more power and steadily dwarfing and subordinating the authority of the States. The tendency of Republican thought and policy would eventually result in the obliteration of State lines and the administration of affairs directly by the central government, while the tendency of the Democratic thought and policy would restrict the exercise of the federal power to its legitimate sphere as defined in the Constitution. The difference between the two in this respect is aptly expressed thus: The Republicans say this is a Nation with a big N, and the Democrats declare these are States with a big S. In harmony with the ideas above elaborated, is the Democratic principle of local self-government, as opposed to government by the federal power.

There are many and wide differences between the two parties and their political beliefs, and necessarily so with reference to their practices. Indeed, while in some matters they are practically in harmony, there are differences as to all important questions; the widest of these differences are in reference to the individual citizen, in regard to his connection with the state. Whether or not our young correspondent contemplates attaching himself to one of the two great national parties, he and all others would do well to make themselves familiar with the doctrines, principles, policies and practices of the political organizations, for in doing so they obtain the most thorough knowledge of the Republic, the object and purpose of our governmental institutions, and why the policies and actions of the nation became necessary, or were adopted or performed. In a republic it is the high duty of the citizen to familiarize himself with the theory and operations of the government, and a study of the politics of the parties is absolutely essential to the acquirement of the knowledge that is necessary to the faithful, honest and intelligent performance of his duty to the state by the citizen.

Our unrepentant, almost infamous system of Territorial government has given little occasion for the application of national politics to our governmental affairs. The principle of local self-government is practically unknown, and the only incentive to learn of national politics is the hope or knowledge that the time approaches when the Territory will escape from its thralldom and its people become citizens in the full meaning of the term.

INCONSISTENT CRY.

During the campaign Mr. Blaine and his organs harped loudly about the bad effect that Cleveland's election would have upon the manufacturing industries of the country. They declared that mills would be shut down, wages be reduced, and general stagnation of trade, as well as suffering among the laboring classes follow. All this was to be brought about by the election of a Democratic President who stood upon a platform which contemplated the reduction of the tariff duties and the taxes to the absolute needs of government economically administered. Since the election two or three mills have been closed, others put on short time, and several have reduced the number of operatives and cut down wages. Whenever any of these things has occurred the Associated Press has eagerly reported the fact, and the Republican organs have commented on it as evidence that the country is going to ruin on account of its "free trade." Your political organ is the most unreasonable thing under the sun, not excepting Ben Butler and Dr. Mary Walker. It is stubborn without facts to rest upon, and in nine cases out of ten is radically inconsistent. Now in this matter of present industrial prostration it is the height of impudence as well as the rankest of inconsistencies to charge it to the election of Cleveland. The laws for twenty-five years have been made by Republicans and administered by Republican Presidents. There is not a solitary enactment in the statute books relating to the tariff that the Republicans did not devise or sanction, and a Republican President approved. There has been no change of policy or officials since the election, and whatever is wrong can by no process of reasoning or juggling be chargeable against the Democrats. If the industrial depression is due to free trade, then the Republicans are responsible for it; if it is due to protection, the Republicans are alike responsible for it. Two years from now, should the Democrats change the tariff laws, and matters grow worse, the organs might find excuse for grinding out walls against the Democracy, but now it is folly to berate the Democrats for the industrial prostration.

If the Republicans would look for the true cause for the closing of mills and the reduction of wages, they would find it in their own protective laws which, by reason of the enormous profits that they give, have led the manufacturers into over-production. Whether goods are dear or cheap the people consume only what they require; when the supply exceeds the demand there is certain to be stagnation. The protected manufacturers, lured by the large profits which Republican laws would give them, have piled up goods greatly in excess of the demand, and now they must shut down and wait until the surplus stocks are worked off. Meantime their employees will have to be idle, victims to the operations of Republican protective laws.

Dr. BUCHARD, of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" notoriety, is reported to be fretting himself to death, believing that it was his unfortunate speech that caused the defeat of Blaine. Poor old fellow! If he weren't so childish he would rejoice and make merry for having been an accidental instrument for doing his country great service.

WHEN GROVER CLEVELAND goes to Washington for his inauguration it will be his first visit to the national capital.

THE NEW CITY TREASURER.

The statement of Mayor Sharp in the City Council last evening, that Mr. O. F. Whitney had been selected by the committee on elections to fill the vacant Treasuryship of Salt Lake City, and the action of the Council in promptly and unanimously sustaining the selection, will be greeted with the approbation and endorsement of the great majority of our citizens. Mr. Whitney is one of Utah's representative young men, and his name is favorably known in his party as one of the staunchest supporters of its principles. He formerly served for a time in the City Council, and though he is better known in the field of letters than that of finance, he brings both integrity and ability into his new labors, and these are the amplest guarantees Salt Lake's citizens will be apt to require.

HAVING WORN out so many of the old axes, the Blaine organs are now harping with great glee on the fact that Cleveland did not carry his own city of Buffalo. True, he did not, but Buffalo gave Garfield 3,300 majority, which Cleveland succeeded in cutting down to 1,488. If the Blaine men can find anything in this to crow over, they should be permitted to yell themselves hoarse. On the same principle they would express joy over the outcome in Iowa. Four years ago Iowa gave Garfield a plurality of 78,059, and a majority of 45,662; on the 4th instant it gave Blaine a plurality of 18,000 and a majority of 16,000. There should be rejoicing all along the Republican line, over what Cleveland did not do.

THE REPUBLICAN office holders spell inauguration day, "March forth."
